Journey Preferences

- Open to SET/DET, willing to work with everyone except HIV positive, yes to termination and reduction.

Additional Information

Her recent match did not work out, as her first transfer did not result in pregnancy and the second transfer initially resulted in a positive pregnancy. However, no fetal heartbeat was detected at her 9 week appointment, and a missed miscarriage (early pregnancy loss) was diagnosed.

Husband is her main support for this journey. They do have other close friends and coworkers that live locally that would give support in relation to this journey as well.

She does not have her own health insurance plan so she would need health insurance purchased for her.

Letter to Intended Parents:

Why I want to be your surrogate.
Hello Future Intended Parents,

My name is Amanda, and I am primarily a stay at home mom with much experience working as a Mental Health Aide. I absolutely adore my job so much that I still occasionally pick up shifts a few times a week! Having the opportunity to be there for kids and offering them a listening ear as a Mental Health Aide brings me immense joy. I've been with my current company for four fulfilling years and I always look forward to more years to come.

I come from an Asian background, specifically Laotian, while my husband, Elias, is Mexican. We've been together for six years, married for two. Elias is the service coordinator at a tire shop, a role he's been dedicated to for the past five years.

Together, Elias and I are proud parents to three wonderful children. Aaliyah, our eldest at six years old, is a bright and kind-hearted girl who loves reading, math, singing, and dancing. Carmen, our two-year-old bundle of energy, is a little charmer who already knows her alphabet, numbers, shapes, and colors. Our youngest, a delightful 10-month-old boy, is always full of smiles and is eager to explore the world around him.

Since I was 18, I've dreamed of being a surrogate, but I wanted to have my own children first. Now that my family is complete, I'm eager to help someone else experience the joys of parenthood. Initially, I had agreed to be a surrogate for a friend, but unfortunately, circumstances changed, and they decided not to pursue it further. However, my desire to help others in this way remained strong, and after discussing it with Elias, we are both fully committed to this journey.

I believe that everyone deserves the chance to become a parent, and I am excited about the opportunity to make that dream a reality for someone else. Having witnessed the struggles of friends who have experienced IVF, miscarriages, and other challenges related to starting a family, I am in awe of their resilience. I'm grateful for the chance to offer support and assistance to those in need.

Reflecting on my own pregnancy experiences, I can't help but recall each pregnancy and the unforgettable adventures that came along with each one, and I cherish those memories dearly. I'm incredibly excited about the opportunity to help you in experiencing the profound love and joy that accompanies pregnancy, as well as the sheer delight of welcoming a new life into the world and completing your family.

I look forward to the possibility of helping you on your journey to parenthood.

Warm regards,
Amanda

Burgers and ribs

What is your favorite movie/show?
A Walk to Remember

What is your favorite music?
Hip-hop and R&B are my favorite genres.

What is your favorite place?
Being with my family.

Describe yourself as a child?
As a child, I was really outgoing. I was into all kinds of sports and made friends easily. I loved nothing more than being outdoors, playing with my friends.

What are your interests, hobbies and talents?
I enjoy cooking, primarily for my family, but occasionally I like to experiment with new recipes, and I've found a real passion for it.

How would you describe your personality and character?
I'm naturally easygoing and sociable, able to connect with and get along with everyone. When someone needs help or needs someone to talk to, I'm always there to offer support and companionship.

What is your worst fear?
Losing my children would be my greatest fear. I can't imagine what I would do if anything were to happen to them.

What is your strongest dislike?
I'm generally a happy person, and negativity really brings me down and has become my strongest dislike. I prefer to surround myself with positivity because encountering negative people can really put a damper on my day.

What is your fondest memory?
As a child, while I still had few obligations, I valued the chance to visit my best friend's house and spend time together whenever I could. This is a forever memory that I will always be fond of.

What is your greatest achievement in life?
All of my children. They are my greatest achievement and something that I am incredibly proud of.

What goals do you have in mind for the future?
One of my personal goals for the future is to continue my education and also have the opportunity to travel more.

How would you describe your everyday life?
I devote all my time to my kids. I help my 6-year-old with school work, read with my 2-year-old, and entertain the baby. We often sing and dance together too.

Describe what type of relationship you would like to have with the Intended Parents before, during, and after the pregnancy:
Before the pregnancy, my desire is to establish a connection with the Intended Parents and foster a meaningful relationship with them hold throughout and after the journey.

Throughout the pregnancy, I strive to provide the intended parents with a positive and comfortable experience. Open communication is key to maintaining their confidence and comfort during this journey.

After the pregnancy, I hope to maintain a connection with the intended parents. I look forward to ongoing communication, receiving pictures of the baby, and staying updated on how they're doing as a family but I am open and understanding to whatever they are comfortable with after their baby has arrived.

Surrogacy

What is the motivation behind your decision to become a surrogate?
I am eager to support someone in their journey to parenthood. Initially, I considered becoming a surrogate for my friend, who has faced significant challenges in conceiving. However, after her relationship ended, she decided against pursuing the idea further. Upon reflection, I realized that my desire to help someone achieve their dream of having a child remains strong. Thus, I am now considering offering my assistance to another individual or couple who long for parenthood.

Compensation
$58,000

Have you ever been a surrogate before?
No

Have you ever been an egg donor?
No

How do you expect the following people will react to you being a surrogate?(Family)
They are all supportive. Both of my sisters may also seek someone to carry a child for them, given their circumstances and involvement in the LGBTQIA community. My family understands my desire to help in this way. They know me well and are accustomed to my inclination to assist others, so this decision doesn't come as a shock to them.

How do you expect the following people will react to you being a surrogate?(Friends)
They're all aware and really excited for me to begin this journey. Knowing how much I've been longing and working towards this, they simply can't wait for it to finally happen.

How do you expect the following people will react to you being a surrogate?(Children)
My oldest child is expressing some excitement, and she's the only one who somewhat grasps the situation. I don't believe she fully comprehends it yet, as I'm not yet pregnant. However, I've had conversations with her about it, and she's genuinely happy and excited. I am prepared to help her understand more about surrogacy as we go through all of the different stages throughout the journey.

Would you be willing to serve as a surrogate for family of a different race, religion, or ethnic background from your own?
Yes

Please indicate which type of Intended parent you would be willing to serve as a surrogate for:
Unmarried Couple, Single Parent, Same Sex Parent

What would you like the Intended Parents to tell their child about you?
I have no expectations on what the Intended Parents share with their child about me. I'm simply delighted to assist in any way they need and honored that they've chosen me for this role. Their happiness and trust mean the world to me.

If the child requests to meet with you, how would you feel?
I would be open to that, but ultimately, it's about what the parents want and what they feel comfortable with, as it's their child. I don't want the parents to feel any sort of pressure to allow this to happen if they are not comfortable with it.

What reassurance can you give the Intended Parents that you will not change your mind about relinquishing the baby/babies?
I'm fully aware that this child isn't mine, and I'm ready, both physically and mentally, for that emotional moment when I see the parents cherish their first moments with their baby. Once I've made a decision, I stick to it. I firmly believe in keeping my word, so you can trust that my stance won't change. I'm prepared to help a family come together and fulfill their dreams.
